

Precedence Study: Children's Museum of the Arts New York, NY, USA

The CMA in New York City is a unique attraction designed to engage kids with art. They have the opportunity to see, create, and interact with art of all kinds, While playing and having fun. The unique rainbow color scheme guides them through the building, through attractions like slides and rope bridges.

Sequence of Spaces

The colorful hallways of the CMA open up to larger spaces such as classrooms and interactive art pieces. In contrast to the bold hallways, these spaces are mostly white, giving children a blank slate in which to be creative. To advance to the next space, visitors rejoin the whimsical hallway.

Play as a Way to Experience Art

Almost every element of the CMA has play integrated into it. The circulation hallways have fun colors, playground type equipment, and whimsical apertures through which to view art and other spaces. Even traveling through the museum is fun and exciting. The larger exhibits and classrooms are made for fun, interactive creativity, so children can play and learn at the same time.
